Because oil prices are so important to gas monetization projects, it's critical to understand the basics of the shale oil and gas industry both in North America and abroad.

Your presentation will focus the impact of lower crude oil prices and the on-going shale revolution on gas monetization pathways. What are the key issues?

The shale revolution has created new opportunities by producing abundant and low-cost supplies of natural gas in North America. However now the shale revolution is creating new challenges due to increasing supplies of crude oil which are partially responsible for the current collapse in oil prices and the uncertainty about future prices. Since the market value of gas monetization products such as transportation fuels via GTL, methanol, ammonia and LNG are significantly affected by global oil prices, the economics of gas monetization projects are stressed.

In your opinion, what are the most important determinants for investors looking to get involved in the downstream methane markets?

Innovative low-cost conversion technologies producing valuable, marketable products; robust economics and financing, strong organizations, and global supply/demand developments, particularly in China.

What will you be discussing at the upcoming Monetizing C1 Methane Feedstocks Summit?

Accordingly, my presentation will focus on the current state of the shale oil and gas industry and provide insights on its potential future impact on crude oil prices. I also will discuss how the value of gas monetization products are related to crude oil prices as well as illustrative economics.

What presentations are you most looking forward to hearing at the event?

Since we are in the midst of the collapse of crude oil prices, I am interested in hearing all viewpoints regarding these new challenges – so I don't have any favorites.
